Description

Exceptional pair of gilded bronze lamps from the Napoleon III period with high relief naturalist decoration.

This pair of lamps has a superb decoration of flowering morning glories decorated with numerous insects: beetles, spiders, butterflies, etc. and on which birds in relief come to catch insects.

The birds, flowers, leaves and some insects seem to want to detach themselves from the pot-bellied vases as in reality.

The neck of the lamps is decorated with a frieze of stylized palm leaves.

The bodies of the lamps rest on pedestals with elongated gadroons themselves sealed on bases in
