almost brick, and very pale blue, black and cream, provoke contrasts while separating the patterns. The thickness of this carpet is 5 mm, which makes it a flexible piece but whose hold on the ground is stiffened by the density of the knots. The Kashmiris knot these carpets (in Kashmiri: ?????)

They are an ethnolinguistic group originating from the region of the Kashmir Valley, in the Indian state of Jammu and Kashmir, one of the most wonderful regions of India.

The Srinagar region of Kashmir is where these wonders are produced and where they were produced, silk on silk and silk on cotton.

Srinagar, the Venice of India, its carpets decorated with gardens, like the Shalimar gardens, its papier-mâché, and its colorful culture.

India and especially the Kashmir region is not a wool-producing country, hence the little use of this material. Apart from the queen of wools, the "Shatoosh", known worldwide and coming from an ibex from the Ladak mountains.

The wool used in India comes almost entirely from imports.

The pieces from Kashmir are of impeccable quality, knotted with top-notch materials as beautiful as in Iran and have been competing with them for many decades.

This carpet has been cleaned professionally and ecologically.
