Flemish School 17th Century, Kitchen Still Life, Oil On Canvas Framed

950 EUR

Period : 17th century

Condition : Bon état

Material : Oil painting

Description
