Description

Curved Pewter Fountain From The 18th Century And Its Liège Cabinet From The 19th Century.

This pewter fountain is complete and has its curved basin, its reservoir with its lid also curved, and it has kept its original taps.

It has a punch representing a dolphin with three stars, but the goldsmith is not identified "IANEN".

It is curved on the front and on the sides. The cabinet on which it rests dates from the 19th century.

It is probably a work from Liège in oak. In the upper part the reservoir is fixed to the pediment of the cabinet finely worked and carved with foliage scrolls, volutes and motifs.

The cornice in the shape of a gendarme's hat is decorated in its center with a shell.

The lower part of the cabinet on which the basin rests is strongly curved on all its faces and is also finely carved and worked with numerous plant motifs and scrolls, including the lower crosspiece. it opens on the front with a curved door that allows to free up the space of a jam cupboard, there is the possibility of installing a shelf there. the patina of the oak is very blond and light and allows to bring out the pewter fountain.

it is a very decorative fountain piece of furniture and easy to accommodate due to its small dimensions.

some small lacks of sculpture to report.
