Description

A work from the northern school, from the early 17th century, full of gentleness and serenity. It is probably a work from the workshop of Hans von Aachen 1552-1615 Our oil on copper represents a winged orante, dressed all in yellow. She presents a tray filled with many fruits to the Child, while a second angel offers him in an elegant gesture, a white fleur-de-lis, symbol of holiness and purity. Lily that we associate with the Virgin. We will appreciate the shimmering colors, the precision of the line and the details of this representation. Dimensions of the oil of 22.5 cm by 17 cm Dimensions of the complete painting of 36 by 42 cm Some losses - recent framing
