Condition : Bon état

Material : Solid wood

Description

Bamana Culture, Mali

Early 20th century

Hardwood with an old patina from use

Height: 53 cm

Provenance: Former private French collection

An old granary lock representing an anthropo-zoomorphic figure. It features feminine attributes, with prominent breasts, combined with animal characteristics, with large upright ears borrowed from the bat. This type of lock was used to secure grain storage granaries, a vital resource for the people in the arid regions of Mali.
