nevertheless retain an air of pomp", Laprade proposed to rent for the entire duration of the colonial exhibition chairs from the GALLOT house in sycamore. On January 16, 1931, the management of the architecture of parks and gardens proposed, in agreement with Mr. Laprade to the technical committee of the colonial exhibition, the definitive purchase of a model of chair no. 196 ½, from the FISCHEL house, mahogany style, wooden base, with arches, to continue to furnish the Salle des fêtes after the exhibition. The Fischel company provided a quote on January 10, 1931. A private contract was signed on February 7, 1931 with the Fischel company for the supply of 1,500 chairs, model 196 ½ "this chair will be stained mahogany and the seats in a strong tone following the model presented to the architect." After the International Colonial Exhibition, these chairs were used in all areas of the museum and in particular in the reading room of the Laprade library.
