Description

This mid-19th century painting, done in oil on canvas, belongs to the Romantic era. It portrays a touching scene of two girls playing together. One is dressed in an elegant white gown with shoes, while the other, a peasant girl, wears vibrant white, blue, and red clothes with a wide-brimmed hat, highlighting the joy and fullness of life. The figures of the peasant women radiate health and vitality. The artist intentionally emphasizes the bright image of the peasant, reflecting the warmth and liveliness of the scene.

The ball and jump rope in the foreground make this painting an interesting document that tells the story of toys from that period.

In the background, a garden with blooming
