Description

This artistic vase is an eloquent testimony to the excellence of Murano glass craftsmanship of the 1960s, embodying the virtuosity of renowned designer Flavio Poli for the illustrious Seguso glassworks. Poli is widely recognized for his innovative use of the sommerso technique, which involves the delicate layering of glass, creating suggestive plays of color and texture.

The vase's sinuous and soft form expresses an undeniable elegance, with an apparent lightness that contrasts with its actual weight. The thick and heavy glass demonstrates the meticulous craftsmanship specific to the art of Murano glass. The intense and captivating ruby red hue beautifully juxtaposes the yellow interior and the transparent outline. This technique allows for fluid transitions between colors, creating a perfect balance and making this vase both a functional object and a work of art.

The complexity of the layering achieved with the sommerso method creates an eye-catching multicolor effect that immediately captures the eye and enhances the aesthetics of the vase.

Although it bears no signature, its exceptional quality and distinctive design unmistakably attribute it to the glassworks of Flavio Poli and Seguso, the brands of Poli's most famous works.

This vase, perfectly proportioned and refined in design, is an ideal decorative complement for various environments. Placed on a shelf, in the center of a dining table or displayed as a centerpiece in a living room, it will always exude sophistication and elegance.

Its timeless beauty and exceptional craftsmanship make this vase a precious object, capable of beautifying any space. This masterful and finely crafted piece is sure to captivate and inspire admiration, confirming its status as an iconic and authoritative example of mid-20th century Murano glass art.
