Description

This bronze sculpture with a brown patina, titled "Vainqueur au Combat de Coq" is signed Alexandre Falguière (1831-1900) on the base. It depicts a nude, athletic man standing on one leg with the other flexed and extended behind him. His left arm holds a rooster close to his body, while his right arm is raised triumphantly above his head. The sculpture rests on a circular base with intricate details, evoking foliage, marked "Thiebaut Frères Fondateurs Paris". This work captures a moment of victory and strength, as suggested by the dynamic pose and celebration with a rooster, a historical symbol of fighting spirit and bravery. It is relevant for its artistic representation of human anatomy and emotion through body language in sculptural form. Alexandre Falguière (1831-1900), known for
