Located and dated lower right - 1866

Located inland between Marseille and Toulon, the Sainte-Baume massif is visually quite comparable to that of Sainte-Victoire, located to the northwest, near Aix-en-Provence. This place commonly called "Sainte-Baume" is best known for the cave from which it takes its name, where Mary Magdalene is said to have found refuge. A major place of pilgrimage has been there since the Middle Ages. Our work, dated 1866, is certainly done on the spot, on a small, easy-to-move support, and brushed quickly to
