Description

This brown patina spelter sculpture depicts Pierrot and Colombine, two iconic figures of Italian comedy, interacting with a crescent moon. The piece captures Pierrot reaching for the moon while Colombine sits, playing the mandolin. The crescent moon is an integral part of the composition and enriches the narrative of the scene. This work rests on several layers of marble in various shades, namely turquin blue, portor and Valencia yellow, testifying to quality materials and refined craftsmanship. The combination of materials and the romantic theme of the Commedia Dell'Arte make this sculpture an interesting representation of the Art Deco era.  Period: Early 20th century Excellent condition.
