Description

India, mid-20th century, very pretty bronze statue representing the Hindu goddess Parvati, wife of Shiva, wearing a high headdress, a necklace and dressed in a "dhoti". She is represented standing on a lotus in a "tribhanga" posture, a movement related to rhythmic fluidity, also called "triple curvatures"; harmonious balance reflecting the well-being and perfect harmony of body and soul. Height 20.5 cm. The scale witness in the last photograph is a small model of a lighter from a well-known brand.
