Description

Neo-Gothic style oak furniture, opening with a belt drawer pulled by a sculpted tiger's head surrounded by branches and leaves in relief. Below, this furniture has a door with molding and frame with Greek angles. In the center we discover a walking woodcock surrounded by plants. On each side, this furniture has twisted columns. Large moldings form the base with projections placed on flat-bottomed feet. The upper part of this furniture rests on consoles forming large chimeras with tiger heads. A large space separates the top from the high element. The latter has a glass door framed by twisted columns and topped with a large pediment sculpted with a chimera and foliage. This furniture can be dismantled into 3 parts.
