Description

This exquisite artistic vase truly embodies the essence of 1970s Murano glass craftsmanship, designed with unparalleled skill by Flavio Poli for Seguso. Known for his pioneering use of the sommerso technique, this vase is a true demonstration of the artistry and creativity of its creator. The sommerso technique involves layering multiple layers of colored glass into a mass of transparent glass, thus creating striking visual effects of depth and contrast.The vase's unique shape, characterized by a flattened quadrangular prism, is emblematic of modern design and adds a touch of geometric elegance to any space it adorns. This rare shape immediately captures the eye and invites detailed contemplation of its many facets.The vase's color palette - a deep red exterior and a vibrant yellow interior, all encased in a layer of transparent glass - demonstrates impressive mastery of the sommerso technique. The faceted effect of the vase allows the colors to move and blend depending on the viewing angle, transforming the appearance of the vase with every glance. The way light passes through and interacts with the layers of glass further accentuates the intensity and vibrancy of the colors, creating a dance of light and color that captivates the viewer.This delicate and dynamic play of colors is a perfect example of the ability of the sommerso technique to create fluid and seamless transitions between different shades. This multi-layered effect not only enriches the visual appeal of the vase, but also makes it a functional work of art that adds a touch of sophistication and complexity to any decor. In short, this vase is not just a utilitarian object, but a true piece of art, testifying to the heritage and innovation of Murano glass craftsmanship.
