Description

Tapestry woven in wool and silk in the workshops of the AUBUSSON factory in the 18th century. It represents an imaginary landscape composed, on the left, of rocky spurs, on one of which a temple has been built. In the center, houses line a river in front of which a guinea rooster and a young rooster are lounging. On the right of the tapestry, an aerial kiosk surmounted by a drapery contributes to the delicious Chinese atmosphere very popular at that time. Perfect condition, fresh colors, tapestry lined and mounted on velcro to facilitate installation.
