Description

Pair of pyramid-shaped white porcelain lamps, presented on a truncated base resting on a square bronze base. The 4 faces of the pyramid are decorated with gold-painted daisies. The front face has 5, with a decreasing diameter towards the top of the pyramid. The back face, for its part, is decorated in its center with a single daisy. The large base is decorated in its center with a cartouche representing a musical score on which rest a horn and a trumpet; from this set branches stand out. A square-section bronze base supports this architecture. These lamps are in the Italian style of Fornasetti; they can be dated around 1940. They are offered for sale with a pleated lampshade.
