1870. Among the visiting lecturers who trained him were the famous academics Leighton (1830-1896) and Millais (1829-1896). Dicksee was a brilliant student, with an interest in the Pre-Raphaelites, winning many honours and medals. Like many other artists of the period, he spent much of his career illustrating books and designing stained glass windows. He began exhibiting at the RA in the mid-1870s, and also exhibited at the Grosvenor Gallery, although his real base was always the Academy. Dicksee came to prominence with Harmony, exhibited at the Academy in 1877 and purchased by the Chantry Bequest.
