Description

The wire work is "arte povera" which does not lack charm in a spirit of popular art. To convince yourself, you just have to let yourself be seduced by this grape basket made around a barbotine plate. It is a model from the Salins factory, bigger than the ones you usually see, it's in a pretty green with a country decor accompanied by a lace of twisted wires which ends with two handles. It is customary to say that these are grape baskets for these models. It is true that the bunches cling well to it and once washed, the grapes do not alter the earthenware.
