Description

Large cage-shaped chandelier from the Louis XV period. This chandelier is illuminated by six alternating arms of light with large daggers, the shaft is composed of baluster-shaped threads and it ends at the bottom with a very large faceted blown crystal ball. Complete with its crystal plates, some of which are very thick and others of a smoky color. All the crystalware is original with the exception of one of the daggers in the upper part. Parisian work from the Louis XV period around 1750 - 1760. Electrification redone without any drilling of the bronzes.
