Description

Bronze sculpture, with a double green and brown patina, signed Nérin on the terrace. This work represents a lion in full roar, its mouth wide open, detailing the teeth and tongue. The lion's body is in a dynamic pose, with its front legs stretched out as if it were about to pounce. The well-defined muscles suggest power. The whole rests on a Black Cihigue marble base. This sculpture is distinguished by the quality of its production, capturing the essence of the lion's movement and strength, as well as by the artist's signature, which adds value to the piece.

 Period: Early 20th century Excellent condition. Delivery in France and internationally.
