Robert Macaire: imaginary character linked to French romanticism, representing the bandit, the unscrupulous businessman. Invented around 1823, he is recurrent in certain theatrical, novelistic and visual works (caricature, engraving, and later in the cinema). He was created by the playwright Benjamin Antier and embodied by the actor Frédérick Lemaître in the drama L'Auberge des Adrets, performed for the first time in 1823. He was then reprised in 1835 in a second play entitled Robert Macaire. All our
