and studied under Jacques Louis David and François Gérard. Hugo worked with Delacroix and Ingres as well as exhibiting work in her own right, highly unusual for a female artist of the period. Her portrait of the young Greek woman in an Athens costume was exhibited in the Salon of 1833 (Number 1271).

Condition: good condition as visible on pictures, with apparent age wear in the areas of the stretcher.

The frame is from the 19th century, with some age wear but still very beautiful. The frame is sent with the artwork as a gift and is therefore not prone to any damage claim.
