Gouache.

Late 19th century.

h. 9,8 in. ; w. 13,8 in.

View of Constantinople, painted in gouache in the style of Ivan Aivazovsky, celebrated for his seascapes illustrating the Bosphorus Strait. This painting features the Ortaköy mosque in particular, built in 1855 at the deep end of the European shore of the Bosphorus. The mosque of Ortaköy was built at the request of Sultan Abdulmecid I, who commissioned its construction to Nikogos Balyan, an Armenian architect trained in Paris, and part of a dynasty of architects who adorned the shores of the
