A hole to report at the top right (nothing serious)
Exhibited for the first time at the Gaillac museum in 1955, Alex Tomaszuk (1928-2021) was immediately received by critics as a young artist with already established talent. A self-taught painter, who became a true colorist, the artist is also a portrait painter and a great landscape painter. Alex Tomaszuk was able to render with his shades of gray and the red and wine tones that characterize his palette, all the poetry of the landscapes dear to his heart: hillsides of Albi, Carmaux, Gaillac, or even mining landscapes, a true tribute to his profession. Very free in his
