Large and heavy perfume cellar with neoclassical decoration in the Louis XVI style.

The cellar is composed of three cut glass bottles with sides. They are engraved with floral scrolls and a medallion motif: a thyrus for two of them and a torch for the third.

The necks and stoppers are made of silver. There is also an internal glass stopper.

The stoppers are decorated with two palmette friezes.

The whole is placed in a very beautiful mount composed of two openwork bands connected by large figures of bacchanalia spaced by two large crowns of laurel leaves.
