Falguière. Captured by the Germans during the First World War, he was interned in Switzerland. Back in Paris, he exhibited at the Salon des Tuileries in 1922.

After beginnings still influenced by academicism, Bouraine revealed himself in the 1920s as one of the most representative sculptors of Art Deco.

Bouraine was a member of the Société des Artistes Français and participated in the Salon d'Automne.

In 1928, he collaborated with Gabriel Argy-Rousseau, who commissioned several sculptures from him, as well as sometimes with his friend Pierre Le Faguays. He also exhibited two monumental sculptures at the 1937 Universal Exhibition in Paris.
