Description

Important pair of Regency style armchairs from the end of the 19th century. Our two seats rest on four arched legs ending in volutes and decorated at the top with a pretty acanthus leaf work. The crosspieces of the belt are in the shape of an arcade and have a discreet molding. The armrests are straight and each decorated with a sleeve, they end with a scroll. The armrest supports are console-shaped, decorated at their base with an acanthus decoration. The backs are wide, flat and curved at their top. The seat of each seat is firm and very comfortable. It also has an extraordinary depth. The covering fabric has many signs of wear, in fact the threads have been pulled (cat!!!), however it is not pierced or torn and can be kept for a very long time. It has a studded finish.
