The coat of arms is arranged in two parts of equal sizes.
On the right is the golden wheat sheaf tied with azure, certainly linked to the house of Campdavène, which was the first of the counts of Saint-Pol and which is also found on the coat of arms of Gascony.
On the left part, dolphins on a black background and crossbows on a red background are alternately arranged. The whole is topped with a helmet decorated with lambrequins.
Above, a swan sits enthroned holding a key in its beak, and around its neck a crown. The coat of arms is surrounded by volutes, flowers, foliage and ears of wheat.
