Description

Fred W. Carlyon settled in Alaska, in the town of Wrangell, between 1898 and 1906. He ran a jewellery and watch shop there and was an amateur photographer, developing a particular interest in the native Tlingit cultures.

Our fine citrate print immortalises a group of four Tlingit women in ceremonial dress. One of them is wearing a Chilkat blanket around her shoulders and a remarkable wooden headdress.

Vintage print, circa 1900, Wrangell, Alaska.

Photographer's signature and captions in the plate.

A similar photograph is registered in the collections of the University of Washington under inventory number PH Coll 299.3.
