Description

"Ex Libris" this beautiful square created in 1946 by Hugo Grygkar for the House of Hermès does not bear a copyright. In silk twill with hand-rolled edges this beautiful scarf with bright yellow borders and navy blue piping on an ivory background, is available in beautiful hackney carriages, carriages and convertibles in navy blue tones. The colors are still very beautiful and well saturated. Reissued several times in 1998, 2004, and 2007 this rare scarf is sought after for its year is one of the timeless Hermès squares and enthusiasts, collectors and discerning decorators. The design of the term Ex Libris, a Latin name meaning part of my books, was designed by Emile Maurice Hermès, for his personal library. He then included this design on the boxes and packaging of his company. The illustrations were
