Murano wall lights in thick glass paste that have been handcrafted as evidenced by the slight variations visible when observing the glass closely. The visible face which is smooth and soft to the touch has undulations like a shell. The inner face is granite by projection of fine particles of glass while it is still molten which gives this particular appearance when the light is on. Golden reflections appearing through the glass coming from the metal support contribute to the rendering. The basin is fixed on its wall support by two nuts ending in a small golden ball. Dating mid-20th century
