Description

A little boy in polychrome painted biscuit, dressed in the 18th century style, plays the violin, standing on a base and leaning against a tree trunk on which he has placed his cape. Note: the finesse of his face, the research of his clothes and details (handkerchief in the pocket of the jacket, tails of the shirt ...) Under the base, we can distinguish, between 2 points, the letters: n and s the number 7 and the number 761 engraved in the paste. Although there is no known mark, it is most likely a Paris porcelain dating from the end of the 19th or the beginning of the 20th century.
