Description

Born into a family originally from Peru, Albert Lynch's place of birth is uncertain, between Trujillo, Lima or even Germany. The same is true for his date of birth and also his date of death which varies according to the sources. Albert Lynch, husband of Victoria Bacouel was the son of Diego Lynch and Adélaïde Koeffler. Albert Lynch settled in Paris where he enrolled at the École de beaux-arts. He then worked in the studios of the painters Jules Noël, Gabriel Ferrier and Henri Lehmann. He exhibited his paintings at the Salon des Artistes Français, he was rewarded in 1890 and 1892 as well as at the Universal Exhibition of 1900, on the occasion of which he received a gold medal. The characteristics of the artist's works are large feminine and worldly compositions, such as Young Women Taking Tea
