manufacture of wheelchairs. Eugène VINCENT's company, originally a manufacturer of children's cars in 1863, developed its expertise by designing and manufacturing various wheelchairs for the sick and injured. Various models were offered, either for mobility inside the house or apartment, others more specific for walking outdoors. For certain major exhibitions, such as the Franco-British exhibition in London in 1908, the Eugène VINCENT workshops had already offered comfortable modes of transport for the "high society of the time", such as a wheelchair pushed at the back which the Queen of England (Alexandra of Denmark, who became Queen of the United Kingdom and Empress of India by marrying Edward VII in 1863) had been able to enjoy during her visit. Eugène VINCENT's company presented its products in a boutique at 141, boulevard Saint-Germain in Paris VIème and its factory was located at 20-26 rue de Montsouris in the 14th arrondissement of Paris.
