Description

Unique piece of spirituality and tradition, this authentic Nepalese shamanic mask is made of yak leather.

This extraordinary object, dating back to the 20th century, represents the craftsmanship and symbolism deeply rooted in the shamanic culture of the Himalayan regions.

They are traditionally made by first working the wood into the desired shape, this is then rubbed with yak butter, finally the yak skin is placed on top and everything is smoked over the fire, giving the desired shape to the skin.

In Nepal, the shaman plays an important role in society. He wears this mask as he channels spirits, allowing him to attract drinkable ones and ward off malevolent ones.

These "good" spirits help cure illnesses and guide villagers through important life changes, such as birth, change in social status, and death.

Perfect for enriching a collection of ethnographic art and a Wunderkammer, ideal as a decorative element for interiors, adding a touch of mystery and exotic charm.

The mask has small imperfections and fuzz due to the artisanal nature of the item.
