Description

Large full-length wooden sculpture carved in the round in linden wood. It represents a splendid Archangel erected in a proud and solemn pose with his imposing wings spread. It is truly of extraordinary elegance with a particularly elaborate but perfectly realistic movement of the garments without sculptural excesses and stylistic forcing. A classic setting prevails with a strong sensation of serenity and balance. Carried out in the late 18th century, in the middle of the neoclassical Louis XVI period, by a Flemish artist gifted with great sculptural ability and stylistic knowledge. The statue offers a truly remarkable scenic effect with the linden wood that shines in a magical luminous and golden halo. Its conditions are excellent with no shortcomings and no restorations with the
