Description

Elegant sculpture group in polychrome porcelain, blue and white, with gold finishes, representing a musician and a noblewoman intent on attending the concert. The musician, sitting on a stool, is immersed in the act of playing the cello, wearing typical eighteenth-century clothes, with a jacket decorated with blue flowers. The noblewoman, who is listening to the music, is elegantly seated on an armchair, adorned with a magnificent dress, a necklace and a fan that she holds in her hand. Between the two figures there is also a small twisted column, surmounted by a vase of flowers. The attention to detail and the accurate representation make of this sculpture group a refined piece, capable of enriching any environment with taste and elegance.
