Haute-Vienne, is one of the oldest porcelain factories in Limoges, founded in 1774. It owes its development to the discovery of kaolin in this region, essential for the production of high-quality hard porcelain. Under Baignol's direction in the 19th century, the factory maintained its prestige by producing pieces of exceptional whiteness and great finesse. Its hand-painted decorations include floral motifs, palmettes and gilded ornaments characteristic of the neoclassical style. La Seynie, under Baignol, is renowned for its tableware, decorative objects and special orders. Its production combines artisanal tradition and technical innovation, making it a reference in the history of French porcelain. Today, porcelain marked "La Seynie" or attributed to this period are highly sought after by collectors for their elegance and timeless refinement and are extremely rare.
