Description

This painting, signed Eleanor Susannah Wood and dated 1881, is an oil on canvas depicting a still life remarkable for its realism and poetry. The composition features a basket overflowing with bright oranges, whose vivid color immediately catches the eye. This vibrant hue of the fruit, accentuated by the darker colors of the background, is enhanced by the delicacy of the crocuses and the textural richness of the hydrangea flowers. The whole is illuminated by a subtle play of light, which enhances the vivacity of the colors while giving a remarkable depth to the scene. The choice of a dark background accentuates the contrast with the fruits and flowers, a recurring characteristic of works from the Victorian period. The artist's signature, located in the lower right corner, underlines the
