Description

Very interesting (small) statuette of a Lakhon Khol dancer. This is the masked dance in a dramatic genre, here wearing the mask of the monkey god Hanuman. Large circular base, in stamped and chiseled silver with rows of foliage in slight relief. The statuette rests on a small circular base, integrated into the larger one by a system of screw threads. The character seems rather in silver-plated bronze, but I didn't check, great finesse of details of the mask and its costume, beautiful antique and curious item !

Good general condition, note all the same a slight depression on the edge of the base, which created a small crack.. Well mentioned on my detailed photos, thank you for looking at them carefully, I am not hiding anything!
