Description

Antique Japanese Satsuma porcelain tea set by Taniguchi Komakichi (Taisho period)

This exquisite 24pc antique Satsuma porcelain tea set from Japan consists of 12 teacups and 12 matching saucers, showcasing intricate hand-painted designs with traditional Japanese motifs. Created during the Taisho period (1912-1926), the set reflects the height of Satsuma porcelain craftsmanship, which was highly sought after in export markets of the time.

The teacups feature finely detailed scenes of geishas in serene outdoor settings, surrounded by cherry blossoms, traditional Japanese architecture, and Mount Fuji. Gold accents enhance the rims and handles, adding elegance to the pieces. The characteristic fine crackle glaze, a hallmark of authentic Satsuma porcelain, is prominently displayed.

The saucers complement the teacups with matching landscape scenes, featuring geishas, pagodas, cherry blossoms, and Mount Fuji, all framed by intricate gold patterns.

Maker:

The set was made by the renowned potter-designer Taniguchi Komakichi (1873-1925), known for his exceptional Satsuma porcelain works. The bases bear the name "Taniguchi" (??) alongside the Shimazu clan crest, a mark of authenticity and a connection to Japan's centuries-old porcelain traditions. The "Made in Japan" mark indicates the set was produced for export, likely in 1921, following U.S. import regulations introduced that year.
