part in the second public exhibition in Turin, which took place at the Valentino Castle. Having acquired a certain recognition, she executed in 1841, commissioned by King Charles Albert, two works for the renovated Galleria del Daniel of the Palazzo Reale in Turin: the Portrait of Eustachio Chappuis and the portrait of Attho, Bishop of Vercelli. In Turin, in 1842, she presented four oil paintings at the first exhibition of the Society for the Promotion of fine arts. In the same year, she undertook a major journey of improvement to Florence and then to Rome. In 1843, she was named an academician of merit by the Academy of Virtuosi at the Pantheon and later received a similar nomination from the Academies of Fine Arts of Florence and Perugia. She then married Count Claudio Faina of Orvieto with whom she had three children between 1844 and 1851. In a context of delicate political situation, and due to the political position taken by her brothers-in-law in the years 1850, her artistic activity slowed down. Relations with her husband deteriorated, she returned to northern Italy, Giuseppina's maternal birthplace. In 1871, she participated in the first national exhibition of women's works, which took place in Florence. She died in the same city in March 1872. The paintings of this artist are very rare and full of great sensitivity. The work we are presenting is a work of youth, which she executed at the age of twenty-one, while she was still training in the workshop of Biscarra, as indicated by the annotation on the stretcher. : Giusseppina Anselmi painted (this painting) (1839) under the direction of Professor Biscarra. This reworking of the work Virgin in Prayer, a famous 17th century painting by Sassoferrato, was to be part of the classic copying exercises for young painters. The exercise is more than successful for Giuseppina who delivers us a striking work with vibrant colors. In 2016, the Foundation for the Museum "Claudio Faina" of Orvieto dedicated the exhibition of paintings, drawings, sketches and documents entitled Giuseppina Anselmi Faina to
