Villa Faucheur. Camille Le Tallec quickly decided to faithfully perpetuate the tradition of porcelain decoration from the Sèvres factory by transforming the family business into a modern ceramics workshop with around thirty painters who were the custodians of the tradition and French know-how of porcelain painting from the 18th and 19th centuries. The motto of the Le Tallec workshop was: "No copies, no pastiches, just work well done." From 1930 to 1960, the Le Tallec workshop grew and its reputation spread to the most prestigious tables, including orders for Queen Elizabeth II of England, Queen Juliana of Holland, the Shah of Iran Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, the French Republic, the city of Paris and several large fortunes and artists.
