Description

Paul-Émile Pissarro is the fifth and last son of Camille Pissarro and Julie Vellay. Raised in an artistic household like his brothers, it seems that he was the most predisposed to painting: a white horse, drawn at the age of five, received praise from the writer Octave Mirbeau. His father, impressed, decided to keep it apart in his private collection Paul-Émile Pissarro's painting was influenced by Paul Cézanne, whom he had met several times in Paris.
