(1550-1622)
Diana the Huntress
tile carved in high relief in marble 20×43 cm

The goddess of the hunt is lying in a lascivious pose on the bare ground with a light peplos covering her limbs, leaving her shoulders uncovered and her beautiful profile framed by locks elegantly styled at the nape of her neck. One arm raised to show the bow, while the quiver with arrows rests on the ground. Behind her a hare, the fruit of the hunt, while in front of her a greyhound with nervous features approaches her. On the far left a leafy tree.
