Description

This exquisite antique Italian bench, crafted in the 18th century during the Louis XV period, is a remarkable example of Venetian craftsmanship. Made from solid walnut, it embodies the elegant and ornate style characteristic of this era. The bench features gracefully wavy lines that enhance its rustic charm, while the arched backrest showcases intricate turned decorations. The armrests and feet also exhibit a fluid, curvaceous design, adding to the bench's overall aesthetic appeal. One of its standout features is the seat, which opens to reveal a spacious internal compartment, perfect for storing a variety of items. Although the original lock has been lost over time, the keyhole remains visible, hinting at the bench's historical significance. Comfortably accommodating four people, the solid wood seat
