Description

This two-body sideboard opens at the bottom with a double door with recessed panels and a mitered frame with interior molding. These doors, fitted with an original functional lock with chiseled brass entries, reveal a shelf mounted on a rack. The sober belt is fitted with a drawer. The upper part of this recessed piece of furniture also has a double opening with small and large molded panels on the inside, accompanied by a lock and similar entries. Here too, behind these two doors, is a shelf mounted on racks. The upper and lower half-column uprights are dressed with collars and bronze rings. This sideboard rests on four ogival feet. The crosspiece is decorated with a relief sculpture with flower decorations. The whole is topped with a soberly molded recessed cornice. This two-body sideboard, interesting for
