Description
-------------

Pair of large curule stools from the Empire-Consulate period.

Elegant and very rare pair of curules with swan necks in solid mahogany from the Empire period, whose architecture is directly inspired by Roman antiquity.

On an X-shaped base ending in small lion's paws, these stools feature rare rear uprights topped with two balls reminiscent of the curules of the Roman emperors.

The front uprights, as for them, take the form of swans.

The curvature of their necks became, from the 18th century, the image of sensuality.

Georges Jacob designed models of curule seats
