Description

This painting depicts an intimate genre scene from the late 18th century, showing a woman feeding two young children. In the spirit of Jean-Baptiste Charpentier le Vieux (1728-1808) and with a treatment reminiscent of the style of Carle van Loo, the work illustrates a moment of everyday life with a simple composition and a soft colour palette. The clothing of the figures and the surrounding objects reflect the modest lifestyle of the time. The emphasis is on gestures and expressions, evoking a peaceful, family atmosphere, characteristic of genre painting of this period.
